The Asian and Middle Eastern Studies Program (AMES) aspires to create a better understanding of Asian and Middle Eastern cultures and their place in the world through an integrated course of interdisciplinary study. The structure of requirements and electives (see below) is designed to ensure a comprehensive education, while still allowing participating students latitude to develop their own interests. Guidance will be provided by an adviser chosen from among the faculty who regularly offer Asia and Middle East-related courses.

Total credits required to complete an Asian and Middle Eastern Studies major: 53

Learning Goals: Upon graduation, a student will be able to:

- Major-Specific Areas of Knowledge
  - Identify and interpret important ideas, assumptions, and debates that are central to the study of Asia and the Middle East.
  - Develop an interdisciplinary approach to understanding and engaging in discussions about issues in the field of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies.

- Accessing Academic Community/Resources
  - Comprehend, digest, and analyze scholarly works with attention to the author’s thesis, methodology, structure of argument and use of evidence.

- Critical Thinking
  - Develop skills of critical analysis that are broadly transferable.
  - Analyze issues with a variety of tools and approaches from a range of disciplines.

- Research Experience
  - Conduct a substantial academic inquiry about a focused research question, demonstrating a depth of understanding of a research area, the mastery of relevant methods, and a capacity to generate substantive results in the form of a senior thesis.

The Asian and Middle Eastern Studies major: The major consists of 53 credits divided into the following areas: language courses (16 credits), required courses (9 credits), concentration courses (usually 12 credits) and elective courses (16). Students must take classes covering at least two regions (see below), with all three regions being strongly encouraged. No more than 17 credits earned in off-campus programs or transfer credit, and no more than 4 credits in independent study may be used to fulfill major requirements.

Language Courses: AMES majors must complete two years of a language at Whitman, or the equivalent (16 credits). Students placing into second-year language classes will be exempted from eight credits from the language requirement. Students placing into third-year language classes or higher will be exempted from all 16 credits from this area. Language beyond the second year is strongly encouraged and can be used to fulfill elective credits. Taking course work in an additional language, if approved by the AMES faculty (see below), can also be used to fulfill elective credit. While students are not required to study abroad, this is highly encouraged.

Required Courses: All AMES majors must take Asian and Middle Eastern Studies 160, 490, and 492 or 498 (nine credits). In the final year students must pass a senior assessment consisting of an oral defense of their thesis.
Concentration Courses: Three courses at the 300 or 400 level from at least two disciplines (typically 12 credits) defining focus of study in a topic or region, providing context for the thesis. Two of the three courses must be taken at Whitman. Independent study and language classes cannot be used to fulfill the concentration. The proposed concentration and list of classes for the major must be submitted to the AMES faculty by the end of the week following Thanksgiving break in the fall semester of the junior year. The proposal must include a title, the names of the three proposed classes for the concentration, an explanation of how the courses fit together and complement each other, a statement about the student’s methodological preparation to pursue the concentration, and a list of the rest of the classes for the major. As appropriate, the AMES faculty may require a student to take a non-AMES disciplinary introductory or methods course (this could count as elective credit towards the major).

Elective Courses: AMES majors must complete at least 16 credits of elective courses, of which at least 8 must be above the 100 level. These courses complement the concentration, such that, in combination the student has worked in three disciplines and two geographic areas.

Capstone: A senior seminar (3 credits) in the fall, in which students expand on themes and ideas about the study of Asia and the Middle East, and formulate a thesis topic based on a firm foundation of methodological and theoretical discussions; followed by completion of thesis (2 credits) in the spring. Senior assessment consists of an oral defense of the thesis.

Most of the classes which count towards the Asian and Middle Eastern Studies major are offered through other departments (see list below). These courses can be broadly divided into three geographic areas (identified after each course): 1. East Asia 2. South/Southeast Asia 3. Middle East/Islamic World

160 Introduction to Asian and Middle Eastern Studies
Not offered 2019-20
4 credits
Taught once a year by a faculty member in the Asian and Middle Eastern Studies program, this course provides an introduction to different scholarly approaches to the study of Asia and the Middle East. The course examines topics such as Orientalism, colonialism and post-colonialism, gender and class, ethnography, religious and philosophical traditions, nationalism, globalization, and notions of tradition and modernity. Explorations into the nature and history of area studies will help to frame the study of various themes and debates. The course is not designed to offer an overview of all of Asia and the Middle East or any particular academic discipline within Asian and Middle Eastern Studies. Rather, this interdisciplinary class analyzes the history of how Asia and the Middle East have been defined and studied. Reflecting this interdisciplinary focus, this course engages with a mix of different types of texts and media, including literature, architecture, visual culture, film, ethnography and critical theory. Open to seniors only by consent of instructor.

200 Special Topics: Summer Seminar in Chinese Studies – History of Ethnic Interactions in Yunnan
Summer 2019
McKhann
2 credits
Course offered at the Whitman Summer Studies in China program. Taught in China over a period of six weeks by the Whitman faculty member who is resident director. The course explores selected topics in Chinese studies and incorporates classroom and field studies. Prerequisite: admission to the Whitman Summer Studies in China program. Prerequisite: Acceptance into the Crossroads WSSC Summer 2019 course. Course fees and international airfare estimated will be announced in Fall 2018.

201-204 Special Topics: Intermediate Level
4 credits
The course explores selected topics in Asian and Middle Eastern studies at the intermediate level. Any current offerings follow.

221 Silk Roads Field Course
Not offered 2019-20
2 credits
This course looks in depth at selected sites along the silk roads of Asia, both in the classroom and during a field trip. One hour per week throughout the semester, and a field trip to Asia over the spring break. Students will explore the past and current situations of specific sites to be visited during the field trip through pre-trip readings and research presentations, keep a detailed journal during the field trip, and give a multimedia or poster-style presentation of a researched aspect of the trip to the college community near the end of the semester. Students must apply for the course, and pay a course fee to be announced. Corequisites: Biology 121 and History 121.

301 Special Topics: Advanced Level
4 credits
The course explores selected topics in Asian and Middle Eastern studies at the advanced level. Any current offerings follow.

411, 412 Individual Projects
Fall, Spring
Staff
1-4 credits
Directed individual study and research. Prerequisites: appropriate prior coursework in Asian and Middle Eastern studies and consent of the supervising instructor.

490 Senior Seminar in Asian and Middle Eastern Studies
Fall
Staff
3 credits
Taught by an Asian and Middle Eastern Studies faculty member with guest participation by others. This class expands on themes and ideas about the study of Asia and Middle East first examined in Asian and Middle Eastern Studies 160. Like Asian and Middle Eastern Studies 160 the course is not limited to a particular part of Asia or the Middle East nor to a particular disciplinary approach. The class also will provide seniors a structured program for helping them to formulate a thesis topic based on a firm foundation of methodological and theoretical discussions in the discipline of Asian and Middle Eastern studies. Students will conduct research related to their thesis topic resulting in a detailed research proposal. Open only to Asian and Middle Eastern Studies seniors.

492 Thesis
Fall, Spring  Staff  2 credits
Senior majors will work with an adviser to record in a thesis a substantial original research project based on the research proposal completed in Asian and Middle Eastern Studies 490. Open only to Asian and Middle Eastern studies seniors.

498 Honors Thesis
Fall, Spring  Staff  2 credits
Designed to further independent research leading to the preparation of an undergraduate honors thesis in Asian and Middle Eastern studies. Required of and limited to senior honors candidates in Asian and Middle Eastern studies.

Prerequisite: admission to honors candidacy.
